

Irish PIDGEONs of Liverpool and Birkenhead, Cheshire

James Pidgeon came from King's County (now County Offaly), Ireland about 1836 or '37 with his wife Ellen and daughter Julia Maria. They settled in Liverpool, Lancashire, but Ellen died in 1854. After remarrying, James and his family moved south across the River Mersey, in about 1860, to settle in Birkenhead, Cheshire. James fathered seven daughters, so the Pidgeon name has died out.

* King's County, an inland county, Ireland, province of Leinster; area 493,985 acres, of which 351,495 are arable. A large portion of the N. and N.E. part is covered with the Bog of Allen, and the S. with the Slieve Bloom Mountains. Limestone occurs in the N.W., and has been quarried. The soil is in some places very rich, but in others it is light and gravelly; at an average, it may be reckoned of a medium degree of fertility. The principle produce is oats, wheat and potatoes, with no manufactures. King's County returns two members to parliament. The county town is Tullamore. Pop (1901), 60,129.

Tullamore, a town, King's County, Leinster, Ireland, on the Clodagh river, 58 miles west of Dublin. There are two breweries, a large distillery, aerated mineral-water works, &c. Pop. 4522.

The Modern Encyclopedia (1902)

After independence in 1921, King's County was renamed County Offaly, after the ancient Kingdom of Ui Failghe.
